A few months ago Elio Aleman was confined to his bed, unable to move after a fall that broke his spine. Thanks to our neurosurgery program, he was able to have spinal surgery as well as the necessary follow-up care. Without our donors and volunteers, we wouldn't have been able to support Elio and his family.

Education in dental care and fluoridation is part of each of the dental brigades we carry out in rural schools in Western Honduras.

After his talk on the importance of fluoridation, José Bautista, the CAMO Honduras Executive Director, shows the kids and their parents how to brush their teeth.

THE PEOPLE WE SERVE

WHAT DRIVES PEOPLE TO LEAVE THEIR COUNTRY, DESPITE THE DIFFICULTIES AND DANGER OF THE TRIP? José Lorenzo, who is 40 years old, was not alone in leaving Honduras to pursue a better life for his family.

But on August 23rd, 2018 that dream became a nightmare: Mexican police attempted to capture his group of immigrants, who were heading for the US border in a train known as “the beast.” In an attempt to escape the police, Lorenzo jumped off the train—but, horrifyingly, he ended up under its wheels. The next thing he remembers is waking up in a Mexican hospital, far from his family, with no money and a leg that needed to be amputated.

A few weeks later, after his amputation, he began to heal and was sent back to his village in Pueblo Nuevo, Santa Bárbara, Honduras. The sad reality of his new life hit him even harder than the train had... what could he do now? How would he feed his family? But he had no time for despair: his family needed him and fields don't plant themselves. With a machete and a plastic tube, he created his own prosthetic. It wasn't comfortable, but at least he stabilized his leg enough to be able to plant some beans.

A few days later a World Vision worker came to his village. Hearing Lorenzo's story, the worker immediately called us and made an appointment for an evaluation and measurement.

Now, a month after that encounter, José Lorenzo is back in the prosthetics lab. This time, he is using a real prosthetic. Holding his old crutch in one hand, he says with a smile, “This is like being born again... like taking my very first steps. Thank you!”
